TRENTON - Governor Jon S. Corzine has nominated Deputy Commissioner Jennifer Velez to head the Department of Human Services (DHS).

Velez’s nomination was announced after the resignation of Clarke Bruno who reportedly resigned for personal reasons. “While I respect Clarke’s decision, I also recognize his talent, both as an advocate and as an attorney, and the good work he has done in the time he has been at the department. I have asked Clarke to remain a part of my administration, and he has agreed to continue to serve, and will be joining us as special counsel in the Office of Governor’s Counsel,” said the Governor.

The Governor said that Velez, who first joined state government in 1998 (serving in the Office of the Counsel to the Governor working on DHS’ issues), has demonstrated a long commitment to issues affecting the state’s most vulnerable citizens. “Jennifer is a tireless work-er who is widely respected by key stakeholders, and she has clearly demonstrated her dedication to issues affecting the men, women and children who are served by DHS,” said the Governor. “I am confident that Jennifer’s experience and insight will lead this department through a seamless transition in its continued work to serve our state’s most vulnerable.”

Prior to her nomination, Velez served as DHS Deputy Commissioner for Family and Community Services since January 2006. In that capacity, she oversaw the divisions of Medical Assistance and Health Services, and Family Development. Additionally, she oversaw the Office of Early Care and Education, and the Office of Prevention and Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities. As a senior executive, she had responsibility for administering and managing more than $6 billion in the areas of public welfare and Medicaid.
Dear Editor,

Having only recently lost some of my hearing it amazes me how insensitive some hearing people can be. Even police officers who should more open-minded or at least aware and tolerant of diversity and other cultures, often are not. I would like to tell you of one experience that happened to me very recently. It was a sunny Saturday afternoon and I was upset from an argument with my best friend. I thought I’d go for a walk. Some of the roads were closed off due to construction.

I asked a police officer standing nearby for directions on how to get around the construction and he waved in some vague direction [to] go down there and around. Having moved here only a few months ago, I was not familiar with the area. With all this plus the construction noise I could not hear, or understand the officer. I began to talk louder and at that point the officer asked why I was yelling at him. I tried to explain that I was hard of hearing but he proceeded to tell me that I was not showing proper respect and that he could arrest me. I walked back home disappointed that I could not explore the city and relieve some stress that sunny afternoon.

Dear Editor,

I’m replying to Carol Granaldi’s Letter to the Editor on page 2 in the January issue of the Monthly Communicator. I felt that her words showed that her comments indicated that she did not truly understanding what the Gallaudet University protest was and is all about.

The protesters were not just students, but also comprised faculty and staff of Gallaudet, as well as alumni, families of students local, national and international all united to show their support to the students and faculty members of Gallaudet. The protest was not about whether Dr. Jane Fernandes was “deaf enough” as she claimed when being interviewed by the press, which was simply an attempt to distract people from the real issues. Among the issues which she refused to address were her unwillingness to meet with student representatives to improve classroom instruction, student events and course curriculums. This refusal to meet with these students for whom she was hired to serve was an openly display of her arrogance. These are only a few among the issues which led students, faculty and families of students to determine that Dr. Fernandes was an ineffective leader as Provost.

Dr. Fernandes and Dr. Jordan in their long tenure at Gallaudet were more concerned over the development of buildings and campus facilities and less focussed on the essentials for the students such as a solid curriculum that would prepare them once they graduated from the university. Parents, students and faculty discovering though the Middle States Association reports of Dr. Fernandes inabilities to manage the school led to many student withdrawals.. While at Kendall as Provost, allegation of mishandling of funds damaged the school financially. Dr. Fernandes had many chances to prove herself worthy in her 11 years as Provost during which she failed miserably. It is appropriate for Dr. Jordan to address the questions still left unanswered concerning funding and curriculum.

Ms. Granaldi’s comments reflect the difference of a perspective that comes from seeing deafness as a handicap as opposed to those of us who are part of Deaf culture who do not see our deafness as a handicap. Often this perspective can be the result of someone who has lost their hearing progressively or at once later in life as compared to those of us who have been Deaf all of our lives and never felt that we had anything to lose.

As for ASL or any other signing languages or dialect, it is a beautiful and rich language of the Deaf, its roots have been noted through out history as with verbal languages. To imply that it ASL is some sort of code or party language is an insult to the community and the culture which uses it.

Gallaudet is a community rich in diversity, with knowledgeable and talented individuals that have goals and dreams for a better world for themselves and for their children, just as the hearing community has. If this means protesting the inappropriate actions and questionable management skills of the leadership, then let it be. I respect and support those who protested and continue to support those faculty members that desire to give the students all they can to prepare them for life after college and the challenges they face.

This Month In History

On March 1, 1988, Deaf students at Gallaudet University, the world’s only liberal arts university for Deaf students, participated in a large rally to demonstrate their support of the selection of a Deaf president to replace the outgoing president. The board’s selection of Elizabeth Zinser, the sole hearing candidate from among several qualified Deaf applicants, spurred DPN, a student/faculty revolt against their decision because Zinser had little experience with Deaf education and no sign language skills at all. The revolt shut down the university for several days, in an effort to push for the reversal of the board decision and selection of a Deaf university president. On March 13, 1988, the board of trustees met for nine hours. The board announced that Zinser had resigned, and that I. King Jordan, the (Deaf) dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at Gallaudet, had been elected President, the first Deaf president in the 143 years since the college was established.

Howard “Rocky” Stone or Rocky as most knew him, was born in Cincinnati on March 3, 1925. He enlisted in the Army during World War II and as a result of his military training suffered a bilateral hearing loss that profoundly impacted the remainder of his life. He was recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency shortly after its inception. In 1979, Rocky retired from the CIA and, motivated by his desire to change the way the world thinks about hearing loss and the way that people with hearing loss think about themselves, he founded Self help for Hard of Hearing People (SHHH). Today the organization is known as the Hearing Loss Association of America and is the largest consumer organization for people with hearing loss. In 1993, Rocky retired from SHHH and shortly thereafter lost his eye sight to macular degeneration, the same year in which he received a cochlear implant. Rocky died on August 13, 2004 of adult respiratory distress syndrome.

Alexander Graham Bell born March 3, 1847, was a Scottish scientist and inventor who emigrated to Canada and later the United States. Today, Bell is widely considered as one of the foremost developers of the telephone. Bell married Mabel Hubbard, who was one of his pupils at Boston University and also Deaf. His invention of the telephone resulted from his attempts to create a device that would allow him to communicate with his wife and his Deaf mother. His ideas about people he considered defective centered on the Deaf. This was due to his feelings for his Deaf family and his contact with Deaf education. In addition to advocating sterilization of the Deaf, Bell wished to prohibit Deaf teachers from being allowed to teach in schools for the Deaf, he worked to outlaw the marriage of Deaf individuals to one another, and an ardent supporter of oralism over sign language. His avowed goal was to eradicate the language and culture of the Deaf so as to force them to assimilate into the hearing culture, for their own long-term benefit, and, for the benefit of society at large. Although this attitude is widely seen as paternalistic and arrogant today, it was mainstream in that era.

Granville Richard Seymour Redmond was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania on March 9, 1871 to a hearing family. He contracted scarlet fever between two and a half years of age to the age of three; when he recovered, he was found to be deaf. This may have prompted his family's decision to move from the East Coast to San Jose, California so he could attend the Berkeley School for the Deaf (later the California School for the Deaf) from 1879 to 1890 where his artistic talents were recognized and encouraged. There his teacher, Theophilus d'Estrella, taught him painting, drawing and pantomime. When he graduated from CSD, Redmond enrolled at another California School of Design in San Francisco, where he worked for three years with teachers such as Arthur Matthews and Amedee Joullion. He famously won the W. E. Brown Medal of Excellence. He associated with many other artists, including Gottardo Piazzoni and Giuseppe Cadenasso. Piazzoni learned American Sign Language and he and Redmond were lifelong friends. They lived together in Parkfield, California, and Tiburon.

Charles Bonnet was born March 13, 1720 to a French family driven into Switzerland by religious persecution in the 16th century. He went at least partially deaf when he was seven years old. Because he was teased at school he received his first education from private tutors. In his sixteenth year, he read the account of the ant-lion in Noël-Antoine Pluche's (1688-1761) Spectacle de la nature (Paris, 1732-1750) which turned his attention to insect life. In 1740, he communicated to the academy of sciences a paper containing a series of experiments establishing what is now termed parthenogenesis (development of an egg without sperm) in female aphids, also known as tree-lice, lant louse, greenfly, or ant cow. This work made him, that year, the youngest corresponding member of the Académie des sciences in Paris. By the time Bonnet was in his thirties his eyesight also began to fail but he continued with his scientific work, relying on developing intellectual models rather than doing active practical work, as he became increasingly isolated from the world.

On March 30, 1980 Children of a Lesser God, a Tony Award winning play by Mark Medoff opened at the Longacre Theatre, where it ran for 887 performances, the longest running non-musical production to play at the theater. The play follows the conflicted professional and romantic relationship between Sarah Norman, a hearing and speech impaired student, and her teacher, James Leeds. The cast included Tony Award winning actors Phyllis Frelich and John Rubenstein. In 1986, the play was adapted into an Academy Award winning film of the same name with Marlee Matlin and William Hurt.

In Memoriam

Jan Niedermaier, beloved friend and consummate professional passed away on January 26, after an 18 month battle with cancer. Jan worked for 18 years as a career education counselor at MKSD, and an American Sign Language interpreter. Jan worked tirelessly to improve her American Sign Language (ASL) skills so that through her work at MKSD, and interpreting, she could give back to the community the many gifts it had given her. In the 1990’s, she passed her national level certification exams and was awarded the CI and CT (Certificates of Interpretation and Translation) from the Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf (RID). For more than 20 years, Jan was an extremely active member of the NJ Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf (NJRID) and served in many capacities within the organization. For her tireless efforts, Jan received the “Distinguished Service Award.” A gifted and articulate writer, Jan served for many years as newsletter editor of the “Mediator.” From 1995 to the time of her death, Jan also served on the NJ Deaf Awareness Week Board as a trustee and worked enthusiastically on Deaf Fest, an annual event of the NJ Deaf Community. She was also a tremendous asset to DDHH having served as a consultant with the screening the division administers to non-certified interpreters. For these contributions, those she made not only to the division but to the field of Deafness, and in the broadest terms imaginable, the Division of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing wishes to thank Jan and express deepest sorrow at her passing.
FOLLOW UP TO BUYING A HEARING AID FOR THE FIRST-TIMER

By Granville Y. Brady, Jr., Au.D.

The article in last month’s Monthly Communicator by Carol Granaldi was an excellent primer for a person with a hearing loss to understand some of the basic styles and technologies related to amplification. The process of being fitted with hearing aids (most losses require binaural or two hearing aids) cannot be compared to purchasing a consumer item like a refrigerator or TV set. In spite of the common misconception, hearing aids are more like optical ware and dental care than they are like an iPod. Someone who is having trouble with seeing or chewing usually does not call the optometrist or dentist to inquire, “How much are your eyeglasses (or dentures)”. Yet people who have trouble hearing think nothing of asking how much hearing aids are. If hearing aids were that simple to buy, then it would seem that they could be found at any drugstore, appliance center or convenience store.

In fact, fitting hearing aids is not an easy task. When the consumer (person with hearing loss) inquires about the cost of hearing aids, the real issue is not the appliance itself, which is a small customized or individualized molded earpiece, an array of computer chips with a microphone and receiver. Hearing aids are not consumer goods. They are, in fact medical devices regulated by the US Food and Drug Administration. Hearing aids have the potential to damage one’s hearing if they are over a certain decibel limit. In New Jersey anyone fitting hearing aids must have a license granted by the Board of Medical Examiners, Hearing Aid Dispensers Examining Committee. Anyone who wishes to fit hearing aids must pass a written and practical examination and must show proof or experience working under a licensed hearing aid dispenser or a course of study leading to an advanced degree—masters or doctorate in audiology.

In addition, anyone licensed to fit hearing aids must present proof of continuing education each year to keep abreast of new technology. Add to that the fact that most hearing aids today are custom designed. An earmold impression is taken and the impression sent to a laboratory that fabricates the hearing aid. The hearing aid is then programmed using proprietary software to meet the patient’s hearing loss as determined by the audiological examination. Hearing aids are not mass produced items like refrigerators and TV sets. And that, of course adds to the cost. Hearing aids are not sold in a traditional sense the way we buy appliances. Before one can be fitted with a hearing aid, care must be taken to determine the size of the instrument in relation to the ear canal and whether there are any contraindications to certain types of fittings. People with diabetes, chronic ear conditions, excessive earwax production and the use of some blood thinners might not be able to wear the CIC type of aids. Other concerns are the person’s ability to insert and remove the hearing aids, range of motion, neuropathy or arthritis in the hands and so forth. Fitting hearing aids entails a great deal more than the effort to procure an appliance. The person fitting the hearing aids, whether it is an audiologist or licensed hearing aid dispenser, must take great care in making sure that no harm is done to the patient.

Adjusting to amplification is not an easy matter. When someone has let a hearing loss go untreated for years, it is unreasonable to expect that hearing aids will provide an instant “cure”. It is more likely that the person will experience some agitation when sounds that have been lost for years or maybe decades are finally heard once again. No matter how much some people are counseled, there is, for many hearing impaired, the temptation to expect to hear everything perfectly. This will not happen. Since treating a hearing loss with hearing aids is only part of the process, any adjustment period should take into account the amount of time the hearing loss was left untreated, as well as any physical or mental impairment that might exacerbate a person’s difficulty adjusting to something new. A first time hearing aid wearer should be encouraged to use the hearing aids as much as possible to acclimatize himself to amplification.

Someone who wishes to obtain hearing aids might want to consult with their primary care physician for a referral or recommendation. Shopping in the phone book or responding to newspaper ads offering huge discounts might be a good way to save a few dollars but the question that everyone who has a hearing impaired friend or relative should ask is not how cheap the hearing aids are but how good is the care my father, mother or friend is getting. Cost will always be a factor, but quality should outweigh the notion that a cheaper hearing aid will give the same benefits as one with advanced technology. Unlike so many of our products today, hearing aids still require a highly skilled and personalized approach by professionals who know how to work with the hearing impaired.

*For a short period, disposable hearing aids were marketed in the United States. They did not meet the needs of the hearing impaired and have been withdrawn from the market.

Dr. Brady is an audiologist and licensed hearing aid dispenser. He was formerly a commissioner on the Hearing Aid Dispensers Examining Committee (HADEC) and presently sits on the Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology Advisory Committee.
Handicapped Scholarship Award Available

Elks Club seeks applicants

January 2007

The New Jersey State Elks Special Children’s Committee is once again pleased to announce that our Handicapped Scholarship Awards are now available. Any and all handicapped high school seniors, who will be furthering their education, are qualified to respond.

We will award two scholarships, one for a male graduating high school senior and one for a female graduating high school senior. These are four-year scholarships worth up to $2,500 per year. In the past, many counselors have been most helpful by participating in this most worthwhile endeavor. We are asking for your assistance in seeking those disabled students who qualify to apply for these scholarships. As with any other scholarship, they will be judged based upon the student’s academic record and financial need.

Applications complete with directions and rules for filing can be obtained by contacting James Kopcho at James.Kopcho@dhs.state.nj.us or by writing to the New Jersey State Elks Special Children's Committee PO Box 1596, Woodbridge, New Jersey 07095-1596 or by calling 732-326-1300 Voice. All applications must be completed in its entirety and returned to this address to be considered.

She served as senior associate counsel in the Office of the Counsel to the Governor from 1998 to 2003.

From 1996 to 1998, Velez was an associate at Pitney, Hardin, Kipp and Szuch. She worked at AT&T from 1988 to 1990 as staff supervisor for the Business Markets Group. She was also an underwriter at Chubb Group of Insurance Companies from 1987 to 1988.

She also served as a government affairs specialist for State Street Partners from February 2003 to October 2003.

PBS Documentary Explores 200 Years of Deaf Life in America, “Through Deaf Eyes,” March 21 at 9:00 p.m. ET

The two-hour PBS documentary exploring nearly 200 years of Deaf life in America, will air nationally on PBS on Wednesday, March 21 at 9 p.m. ET (check local listings). The film was inspired by the exhibition, “History Through Deaf Eyes,” created by Jack R. Gannon of Gallaudet University.

The film presents the shared experiences of American history - family life, education, work, and community connections - from the perspective of Deaf citizens. Interviews include community leaders, historians, and Deaf Americans with diverse views on language use, technology and identity.

Bringing a Deaf cinematic lens to the film are six artistic works by Deaf media artists and film maker: Wayne Betts, Rene Visco, Tracey Salaway, Kimby Caplan, Arthur Luhn, and Adrean Mangiardi.

Poignant, sometimes humorous, these films draw on the media artists’ own lives and are woven throughout the documentary. But the core of the film remains the larger story of Deaf life in America — a story of conflicts, prejudice and affirmation that reaches the heart of what it means to be human.

Major funding for “Through Deaf Eyes” is provided by the National Endowment for the Humanities, Corporation for Public Broadcasting, PBS, The Annenberg Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts. Private individuals have also contributed to the funding of this project. The extensive outreach campaign is funded in part by Sign Language Associates. Outreach partners are the National Association for the Deaf, Gallaudet University, the National Technical Institute for the Deaf at Rochester Institute of Technology, and California State University-Northridge. As part of the outreach campaign, numerous local organizations, some in association with their public television stations, will mount events and discussions exploring the issues raised in the film.

A comprehensive Web site, found at www.pbs.org, accompanies the film. The site includes interviews with the deaf film maker whose work is featured in the documentary, while also inviting viewers to submit their own stories, photographs and films. These will become part of the archival collection of Gallaudet University. A companion book is being published by Gallaudet University Press.

A Consultation for Professionals Dealing in Hearing Aids Services

Following is submitted by The Hearing Loss Association of America New Jersey State Association (formerly SHHH-NJ) to otolaryngologists, otologists, audiologists, hearing aid dispensers and all professionals involved in providing hearing aid services.

After examining, testing, and evaluating your patients or clients for hearing loss and fitting them for hearing aids, do you then direct them to information sources in order to assist them in the adjustments required not only for the hearing aid but also for the new life they are beginning? You are an important resource in assisting them in this often difficult time of transition.

There are national organizations that may have local chapters in your area. There are places where people new to hearing aids and hearing loss can meet and discuss their needs and receive support from others who have also had to adjust to hearing aids and hearing loss. In addition, there are Web sites, reading materials, videos, and demonstration sites for the myriad assistive devices and equipment that are essential to someone with hearing loss as well.

Please provide the following “Starter Information Resource” to your patients/clients. It is important that they understand that hearing aids are just the beginning when learning to cope with hearing loss!

Gallaudet Appoints Interim President

Gallaudet University board of trustees have selected Robert R. Davila as Interim President of the university from three finalists after having rescinded their selection of Jane K. Fernandes this past October. The two other candidates who vied for the interim position, William J. Marshal and Stephen Weiner are both associated with the university and are also Deaf.

Mr. Davila attended the California School for the Deaf in Berkeley where he worked hard to qualify for admission at Gallaudet. Mr. Davila’s interim appointment brings him full circle as a 1953 graduate of the university. After graduating, he taught at Gallaudet for 17 years.

Mr. Davila left his position at Gallaudet when he took a job under the administration of former U.S. President George Herbert Walker Bush as assistant secretary of education. He served as the top adviser for vocational rehabilitation for the disabled. From 1996 through 2004, he served as vice president of the National Technical Institute for the Deaf at the Rochester Institute of Technology. He then became superintendent of the New York School for the Deaf in White Plains, NY. from 1993 to 1996.

The student and community protests of Fernandes’ appointment were based on the contention that she lacked the skills needed for such a post and, more controversially, that she did not show enough support for the significance of American Sign Language and Deaf culture.

Davila’s appointment as Interim President did not go without its own controversy similar to that surrounding Fernandes, with a student protest leader questioning Davila’s own views of American Sign Language as a legitimate language. With the sensitivities surrounding the Fernandes appointment and its reversal, concerns about how best to foster a healing process have been expressed by students and community members alike. Mr. Davila will serve a minimum of 18 months and may stay in the post for up to six months pending the selection of a permanent replacement. This all comes after the announced resignation and retirement of Irving King Jordan, who served as Gallaudet’s first deaf president for 19 years.

American Sign Language Story Hour

After Mrs. Munn’s presentation, seventeen-year-old Deaf-Blind student Jon Gabry shared his experiences. Jon used his left hand to read his Braille notes and signed his PowerPoint presentation using his right hand. His mother, Kathy Gabry, voice interpreted for him. Jon demonstrated his electronic BrailleNote, a device used by the blind to write or read notes in Braille as well as an old-fashioned Perkins Brailler machine. He responded to audience requests to type the children’s names in Braille. The children were fascinated by Jon’s ability to read and sign at the same time and participated in a lively question-and-answer session after the presentation.

Next, dog handler Maureen Kelliher, who works the Kindred Souls Canine Center, showed the children her dog Bear, a Doberman pinscher. She talked about the history and development of the breed, developed in Germany by a tax collector named Doberman to accompany tax collectors on their rounds and to protect the money that they carried.

Attending the Story Hour were students in grades two through five from MKSD, home-schooled hearing children, students with multiple disabilities from three classrooms at the Hunterdon County ESC School in Lambertville, as well as students from Egg Harbor Township School and Luiz Muñoz Rivera School. One hundred seventy people participated.

This story hour was signed by ASL interpreters provided by the NJ Division of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (DDHH), a division of the New Jersey Department of Human Services, and accompanied by a PowerPoint presentation illustrating each page along with the storyteller.

The Story Hour promotes English literacy skills for the Deaf and hard of hearing by enabling them to enjoy simultaneously ASL and English versions of books. Workshops and events such as the story hour are scheduled by Christine Olsen, Coordinator of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing Awareness Program at the New Jersey Library for the Blind and Handicapped. NJLBH is located at 2300 Stuyvesant Avenue in Trenton. For more information about the DHHAP program and story hours, contact Christine at 877-882-5593 TTY or colsen@njstatelih.org. The next ASL Story Hour will be at NJLBH on February 13 at 10:30 a.m. For information about NJLBH and its programs call Anne McArthur at 609-530-3242.
